

Getting Picacho in front of people

A step-by-step distribution plan that costs nothing but time. Written for one non-technical founder with a working product, no ad budget, and no audience yet.

THE ONE ADVANTAGE TO EXPLOIT

Your product manufactures its own marketing material.

Most founders with no budget have nothing to post and nothing to send. You can generate an unlimited supply of professional video and images featuring a consistent character — which is exactly the thing your customers want and can't make themselves. Every plan below is built on that. You are not marketing a tool; you are publishing the output and letting it sell the tool.

Second advantage: the brand and compliance rulebook. Nobody else selling AI video has it, and it's the reason a clinic picks you over buying Kling directly. Lead with it when you talk to regulated businesses.

Phase 0 — Before you contact anyone (2–3 days)

Five things that make every later step work. Do not skip to Phase 1 without these.

#	Do this	Why it matters
1	Open a free tier. 3 generations, no card. Today a stranger cannot see the product work without paying €19.	Every competitor has one. Without it, cold outreach has nowhere to land.
2	Make 20 demo assets. One character, 20 scenarios: clinic, café, gym, street, product-in-hand. Same face throughout.	This is your content bank, your portfolio, and your proof — all from one afternoon.
3	Write one sentence. "Picacho keeps the same face across every video and image you post." Use it everywhere, unchanged.	If you describe it differently each time, nobody repeats it for you.
4	Watermark free-tier output with a small "Made with Picacho".	Turns every free user into distribution. Paid plans remove it — that alone sells upgrades.
5	Claim the handles. Same name on TikTok, Instagram, YouTube, X, LinkedIn.	Free, takes 20 minutes, impossible to undo later if someone takes them.

Phase 1 — Your first 10 paying customers (weeks 1–4)

Not content. Not SEO. Direct, personal outreach — the only channel that reliably works at zero followers, and the only one that teaches you why people say no.

The move that makes this work

Send the work before you ask for anything. Pick a med spa. Look at their Instagram. Generate a 5-second video in their style, featuring a consistent presenter, using their actual services. Send it with no pitch attached. It costs you one credit and about four minutes. Almost nobody in their inbox has ever done this.

The message. Keep it this short.

*"Hi [name] — I made this for your clinic, no charge, just wanted to show you something.
[video]*

It's the same presenter every time, so you can post daily without hiring anyone. Want me to make three more?"

No link. No pricing. No 'quick call?'. The reply you want is 'yes' or 'how?'.

The daily routine

- 10 outreaches a day, 5 days a week. 200 in a month. At a 5% conversion that's your first 10 customers.
- Where to find them: Instagram and Google Maps. Search "med spa [city]", "beauty salon [city]". Pick businesses that post inconsistently — they already know they have a problem.
- Rotate cities so you're never competing with yourself, and so you learn which market responds.
- Track every one in a spreadsheet: business, city, date, replied, why not. The 'why not' column is worth more than the sales.
- Follow up once, seven days later, one line. Never twice.

Expect this to feel slow and uncomfortable. It is the single highest-value thing you can do, and it is the part almost everyone avoids in favour of building another feature.

Phase 2 — Make it repeatable (weeks 3–12, overlapping)

Once outreach is running daily, add channels that compound while you sleep.

A. Publish the output, daily

Post one generated video a day to TikTok, Instagram Reels and YouTube Shorts. Same clip, three platforms, two minutes of work. You already generated the content in Phase 0.

- Best-performing format: the same character in 10 wildly different scenes, cut fast. It demonstrates the one thing people don't believe is possible.
- Second format: screen recording of you typing one sentence and a finished video appearing. Process is more watchable than product.
- Caption every one with the same sentence from Phase 0, step 3.
- Do not chase virality. 90 consecutive days beats one clever idea.

B. Write the pages people search for

Your SEO groundwork is already done. Now aim at what your buyers actually type — problems, not products.

Write a page for	Because someone types
Social media content ideas for med spas	They're out of ideas, not out of tools
Advertising rules for aesthetic clinics	Your rulebook is literally the answer — no competitor can write this page honestly
How to keep the same AI face in every video	This is your core feature, described as a problem
Content calendar template for salons	A free download gets you an email address

One page a week. Each one ends with a free-tier signup, not a sales pitch.

C. Be useful in rooms where they already gather

- Facebook groups for med spa owners, salon owners, and aesthetic practitioners — these are large, active, and full of "how do I make content" posts.
- Reddit: r/smallbusiness, r/Entrepreneur, r/socialmedia, r/marketing.
- Answer questions for four weeks before you ever mention Picacho. Post results, not links. People will ask what you used — that ask is worth more than any link you could have dropped.

Phase 3 — Loops that grow without you (month 3+)

Loop	How it works	Cost
Watermark	Free-tier output carries "Made with Picacho". Every post by a free user reaches an audience of people who make content.	Zero
Agencies as resellers	One agency serving 20 med spas is 20 clinics you never had to find. Offer them a revenue share instead of a discount.	Zero until they earn

Referral credits	Give 20 credits for a referral who subscribes; give the new customer 20 too. You already built credit top-ups — the plumbing exists.	Credits, not cash
Public character gallery	Let people publish a character others can clone. Each shared character is a landing page you didn't write.	Build time only

What to measure

Four numbers. Check them every Friday, write them in the same place each week, and never add a fifth.

Number	Why this one	Month 1 target
Outreaches sent	The only input you fully control. If this is zero, nothing else matters.	200
Replies	Tests your message, separately from your product.	20
Free signups	Tests whether the promise is interesting.	40
Paying customers	Tests whether the product is worth money.	10

If replies are low, your message is wrong. If replies are fine but signups are low, your landing page is wrong. If signups are fine but nobody pays, your product or price is wrong. Each number tells you which thing to fix — that's the entire reason to track them separately.

The honest part

This plan asks for roughly two hours a day, most of it unglamorous, for about ninety days before it compounds. There is no zero-cost tactic that skips that. Anyone selling you one is selling you something.

The failure mode is not that these steps don't work — it's abandoning them in week three to build a feature, because building feels like progress and being ignored doesn't. You have already built more product than most people ever ship. The product is not what's missing.

Start with Phase 0, step 1. Ten free generations is the difference between a stranger seeing your work and a stranger seeing a payment form.
